

How to find your MathID/Machine ID and computer name in Mathematica

From the Help menu, choose “About Mathematica...” and this window will open. Click on the System Information button:

This window will open with the Machine ID (also known as your MathID) and your Machine Name (as it was entered in the registration process).

You can also find the License expiration date on this window.

If you don't know your machine name, go to Start → My Computer and click on "View System Information" on the left side of the window. Another window should open up with a tab called "Computer Name" – click on that tab to find out what your computer's name is. It will be the first part of the name, before the domain name:

(You can also right-click on My Computer from the Start menu and choose Properties to get this same window.)
